

Price Outline

The costs of my aerosol portraits range from $140 to $400. These costs may vary based on a few factors - such as portrait sizes, supplies used, how complex the projects are, delivery and/or shipping costs, and the time required to spend on your piece. For example, a portrait with a size of 24 x 36 inches would cost approximately $200, depending on the amount of work required to put in on this piece.

Do you have a certain budget in mind that you're able to spend? Let me know beforehand and I'll do my best to accommodate. Due to costs of the supplies I use, I'm unable to take on projects with budgets under $140, but I'm willing to put together payment arrangements for my current prices.

To get started, I will need a digital photo of yours to reference in your portrait, which will help me in putting together a "digital sample" (or a rough sketch) that will show what your portrait will look like. To make this work sample, I will need a non-refundable $20 pre-payment that will serve as compensation for creating it, but that cost will go towards the full price of the piece once it's finished. Once we are settled on a design, I will then request half of the project funds as a non-refundable deposit to start the piece, with the remaining price due upon completion.

For example, on a $200 project, the charge for a digital sample would be $20, the non-refundable deposit would be $100, and the remaining cost that's due after the project is finished would be $180.

Lastly, my pieces usually take around 4 to 6 weeks to complete, but if you have a certain time frame that you would like to have this portrait done by, please be sure to inform me of this beforehand. Once the piece is finished, I'll have the piece packaged and delivered/shipped to you. Alternatively, I can make arrangements to have you pick up your piece at my studio.
